Axis That Attacks Passes to Japan

HEAVY BLOWS

Axis Bast Foe in Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Cautious probing by Marshal Erwin Rommel's African Corps has encountered a fury of air attack, artillery fire and harassment by mobile forces, and four days after the British authorities expected an Axis offensive the showdown battle for the Nile had failed to develop.

Writer Along As Tobruk Hit In Heavy Raid

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN
AN R.A.F. BASE, Egypt, Sept. 3.—(BUP)—I paid a return visit to Tobruk Tuesday night. In an R.A.F. Liberator, I saw the Axis-held Libyan town last night being pounded by our bombers. You may have seen the bright lights of Broadway or Piccadilly during peacetime. Tobruk was lit up like those streets as a night-aircraft's searchlights came screaming up at us and we released our bombs. The bombs were dropped on the city which I first entered when the Axis had captured it 18 months ago.

Our party consisted of a swarm of Consolidated B-24s—British air-planes called Liberator—and British Halifax bombers. It was the biggest raid on Tobruk since Axis forces occupied the city in June.

Bombs were dropped on shipping in the harbor and on the docks, in an effort to stem the flow of German tanks and gasoline to Erwin Rommel's army.

It was the last occasion on which newspaper correspondents in the desert were permitted to accompany the raid.

70 Trucks Quipped As Result of Recent Order

Application of new truck load limit regulations by the provincial government has forced at least 70 trucks working on vital projects to stop operating, Jack Baker, secretary of the Alberta Motor Transport Association, stated Thursday.

Taylor emphasized that the truck operators are not striking, but that they have found it economically impossible to operate under the new provincial government regulations.

Fifty-five trucks engaged in work at the city airport and 15 trucks working on the provincial government highway west of Edmonton, have already stopped working.

He pointed out that the province generally has been cut approximately 75 per cent and this drastic cut made it economically impossible for truck drivers to operate.

Delegates from the Motor Transport Association met O. H. McLean, chairman of the Alberta Highway Traffic Board, at 2:30 p.m. Thursday to place the serious situation before the board.

Nazi Attacks Drive Soviets Further Back

By THE CRISTIAN PRESS

German tank armies have been driving the Red armies further back upon the southern approaches to Stalingrad today, Russian headquarters reported, and the Berlin radio said Nazi gins were now within range of the already-bombing Volga railroad.

Hitler is throwing such mass weight in his drive for Stalingrad that the Red army has been driven back to the point where the Volga is joined by the Don, a winter line along the Volga. This had been foreseen by the Red army, and it is being met by a winter line.

There is every prospect that the Russians will be able to hold him there, and also on the northern and southern fronts.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 3.—(BUP)—After three years of military setbacks, the front against the Nazis, Germany still is encircled, the circle has become wider, but also stronger, and the front has turned around 180 degrees.

Marvknoll Missionaries Tortured by Japanese Turn to Page 8

AIMS OUTLINED

Japan Hoping to Divide Britain and States, Then Keep Territorial Gains

Japanese propaganda, even eventually to reach a wedge between Britain and the United States and to reach some sort of a compromise settlement with the United States, is the aim of the Japanese propaganda line, according to a Japanese propaganda expert, who has just returned from the United States after being released from a Japanese internment camp, explains in the following dispatch.—EDITOR

By ROBERT BELLAIR:
British United Press Staff Correspondent

The Japanese assert that they consider Britain their chief enemy and that the United States really is an old and dear friend who has been led astray by the wiles of British propaganda and President Roosevelt's inability to understand Nippon's "sincere motives" in embarking on her "holly war."

The reasons for this propaganda line, which apparently was adopted about the time the agreement was reached to allow the repatriation of Americans who were interned in Japanese prison camps, are, of course, apparent.

The Tokyo military gangsters hope to achieve a number of ends, including:

- 1.—They would like to divide a wedge between Britain and the United States which would make it possible to reach some kind of a compromise peace agreement with Washington while retaining the rich areas in southeast Asia they have seized from Britain and the Netherlands Indies. The Netherlands Indies, it must be explained, are considered virtually a part of Britain so far as Japanese thinking goes.
- 2.—The Japanese hope to weaken the American people's will to war. They believe most Americans are rich and soft and peace-loving and that when they have to start "doing without things" they will prefer to call off the war rather than undergo major sacrifices.

3.—The militarists hope they can weaken President Roosevelt's leadership. All their propaganda, in the line adopted just before those of who were interned near Tokyo were released, was designed to blame Mr. Roosevelt and not the American people for the war. The president is represented as a warmonger who followed a policy which did not have majority support in American opinion before Pearl Harbor.

4.—The militarists also probably fear that the former pro-American sentiments of many Japanese will begin to reassert themselves once the Japanese armed forces suffer a series of important defeats in the field. They want to establish a background of having tried to avoid war with the United States so that they will not be blamed so bitterly by their own people in event they are defeated.

Indicative of the Japanese propaganda line is the fact that at least one Japanese who I know was called before a public prosecutor at the time he was released from prison and addressed as follows:

"You have been held in solitary confinement for many months because there was reason to suspect you of espionage. You can appreciate that a very thorough examination of your case had to be made. It has been made and no evidence has been found against you. Hence all charges against you are dismissed."

"MISTAKEN POLICIES"
We hope that when you go home, you will tell your people that your treatment has been fair and correct according to Japanese law. We hope that you will tell them that the Japanese people have no quarrel with the American people and that we have not forgotten the long Japanese-American friendship.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—(CP)—Britons viewed with calm confidence today the opening of the fourth year of the war, which they expect to last to a new period of offensive after three years in which reverses outnumbered victories.

At an anniversary statement spoke for the nation when he said that he was not at all worried, however long the war, the issue is sure.

"Day by day and week by week the United Nations add to their strength armed forces and in millions of war," he declared.

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Cuddy

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(BUP)—Joe Dempsey, a long, tall guy who looks like Abraham Lincoln without whiskers, said, "Jack's got his mitts up again and God pity the Jews."

Joe Dempsey, older brother of the famous Manny Maser, Jack Dempsey, "Ever since Jack put on that coast guard uniform, he's been just like he was when he was a kid—when he used to square off—and put up his fists. I never could understand what happened to Jack when he squared off. He was a different fellow entirely, even when a guy. Take him at home—al the supper table—any of us always could win him over with him. And if there was a free-for-all on the street, Jack never wanted any part of it. But when he squared off against one man—even me, his brother, he was terribly heavy-headed. I mean those big fists of his were like sledge hammers. Once he hit me on the side of the jaw so hard, my jaw swelled up like I was chewing a whole wall of tobacco."

BROTHER JOE WAS RIGHT
CANCELLING Joe Dempsey's name from the Manny Maser, Colo. the great mountain camp in which the great Dempsey first started throwing around his fists. Brother Joe talks and looks like a big, Virginia Hill Billy—broad, his father came from those mountains—and peaceful Joe picked up all the manliness of his dad. When in his youth was a fiddler at square dances.

We met long Joe Dempsey's Broadway tavern, where we went to meet Lieutenant Jack Dempsey, who left from the coast guard. Tall Joe is running the tavern while the former heavyweight champion is in service. "The fellow who you talk to Jack, now, because he's really got his fists up," Joe cautioned. "And he's been in the war."

Better Joe was right, because Joe Dempsey's today is far different from the pre-Pearl Harbor Joe Dempsey, his coast guard uniform—Senior Lieutenant Dempsey—said, "I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but I can't talk of what I am doing in the coast guard until I've been released from duty." For me to say things.

WIT COAST GUARD
A TELEPHONE call to this Lieutenant and cross-examination through the instrument Mr. Dempsey recited finally in permission.

Durocher Becoming Somewhat Jittery

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers now have a 4½ game lead in their National League pennant prancing, so who's nervous?

Well, Mr. Leo Ernest Durocher, the Dodgers' peerless pilot, appears to be "for" one.

What he has been doing with his pitchers in recent days scarcely can be described without a map and a seeing-eye dog, but it may be worth a try to prevent posterity from confusing the movements with those of a cat.

Yesterday Durocher called off his best pitchers to curb the Eddie Cincinnati Reds, 2-1 in the 10th inning when French had relief only until he was in that game on a fly ball.

Working on one day's rest, Davis was knocked out in the fifth yesterday and Casey took complete charge till removed for a pinchhitter in the ninth. Then Higbee, who had pitched the Pirates Tuesday, was sent to the mound. He walked the first batter and immediately was flagged out in favor of Webster, the rookie, who gave the on-ones, and then Durocher, taking no chances, called in Wyatt

Hot Hassett
NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Buddy Hassett already has driven in more runs and hit more homers than Johnny Sumner. New York Yankee first baseman left season.

For his first relief chore of the year. The Dodger ace finished strong and gave his 17th victory when a game inning to the Pirates Tuesday, was sent to the mound. He walked the first batter and immediately was flagged out in favor of Webster, the rookie, who gave the on-ones, and then Durocher, taking no chances, called in Wyatt

Radio Actor Found Dead in Automobile
HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Radio Actor Walter Paterson, 31, who ended the role of "Mickey" in the National program, "One Man's Family," was found dead in his automobile last night. A garden hose extending from the exhaust pipe to the driver's compartment. He had apparently been dead about 24 hours, said Police Lieutenant Nolan, in-charge of the Hollywood division. He left his home in the Cheviot Hills Tuesday night. Sanders said, apparently taking the garden hose with him and driving into the Hollywood Hills, where his body was found.

U.S. Football Schedules, Winter Sports to Continue

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—By now you know the war isn't going to curtail the football schedules and there will be the usual winter season, according to all signs.

Track, in fact, will be bigger and better than ever on the grounds with the coming of Hagg and Arne Anderson, the Swedes who both lowered the mile record to 4:32 within a week this summer.

Jack cracked the mile mark and put the two-mile at 14:45 within 48 hours.

Can you imagine the business Hagg and Anderson will be in on opposing bespectacled Gilbert Dukes and Little Gregory Hill?

Someone is going to force someone to almost unbelievable limits.

MADISON SQUARE HOCKEY
Hockey is expected to be declared an essential industry by the Canadians which will prevent the bulk of the stars to cross the border.

Lester Patrick, back from a summer in California, denies the report that Madison Square Garden left only 24 dates open for the following year, which "told me to leave the financially stricken Brooklyn Americans would be dissolved from the Eighth Avenue Arena.

The Garden has 48 hockey dates for the American—only the only one of the kind in the country. Madison Square Garden left only 24 dates open for the following year, which "told me to leave the financially stricken Brooklyn Americans would be dissolved from the Eighth Avenue Arena.

I see where Johnny Maricle, who quit the ice a year ago, hopes to resume his defense job with the Chicago Blackhawks, although he has signed to attend a Coast Guard officers' school.

The hockey magnates intend to put another season across somehow, it is plain.

PLANS GO AHEAD
Send in the Garden college basketball schedule is as ambitious as ever.

There will be racing at Hialeah, Tropical Park and New Orleans.

Oil Policy in Province Will Be Announced

Announcement of the Alberta government's policy in covering oil policy in the province will be made by Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, at a session from the provincial Association of Alberta, Calgary, signed by 1500 persons. It was learned the petition presented a regulation of the department under which it was stated, oil leases would be cancelled unless development work had been undertaken by Sept. 1.

No Action Yet

No action to cancel leases has yet been taken by the provincial government. It was unofficially reported Thursday.

Petitioners point out that development work is being hampered by the fact that operators are unable to obtain necessary drilling equipment due to wartime priorities.

Invasion Imperative to Save Subjugated People of Europe

By JOHN COLLINGWOOD READE

The launching of an offensive which will carry Allied forces into occupied Europe is a matter of great urgency for reasons which are not of direct military concern. It is doubtful whether the Russians are really in desperate straits. It seems likely that they will be able to hold the enemy out of all the vital areas which must be preserved at all costs, and they are only just now beginning to throw their resources into the line.

If the Russians can hold out through the winter and keep the enemy in fierce engagement over a long front, military prudence will counsel deferring the European invasion until the late spring of 1943.

By that time the transport situation will have improved considerably, an air-borne army of effective size will have been trained and the still high percentage of trained troops yet lacking equipment will be in possession of their weapons.

VASSAL PEOPLES SUFFER

The most compelling reason for advancing the invasion date and accepting considerable risks is to end the suffering in the languishing condition of those whom we are fighting to liberate.

The passing of another winter without relief will find the Greeks crushed beyond hope of revival. The Dutch are being liquidated by Nazi brutality, and all strong national groups are either being deprived of their leaders by firing squads or broken up and dispersed by expatriation.

To some extent the unhappy situation of these vassal peoples is being accentuated by Allied operations. The German fear of an attack from the west, and their industrial production is being drastically curtailed by Royal Air Force bombing raids. Terrified by the possibility that the civil population in the western invasion zone will rise en masse and turn against their oppressors wherever Germans can be found singly or in small groups, the Nazi authorities are ordering themselves in brutally repressive measures.

Families have been broken up, the able-bodied of both sexes are being expropriated and set to work under the most wretched conditions in Poland and Czech-Slovakia. The longer we hold out the threat of invasion without actually landing, the more time the Germans will have to complete their process of demoralizing, moving, or exterminating those whom we are determined to liberate and who may have been our best friends and most useful allies.

SIGN OF AXIS WEAKNESS

The Nazi Office of Labor Information has been so bedeviled by the demands of the army, the defence forces and the occupation authorities, not to mention the need for clearing up and repairing the damage wrought by the R.A.F., that it has been compelled to order all the factories in occupied countries to cease civilian production entirely. Only factories supplying the German Army and the German occupation authorities will be permitted to operate at all.

Translate this order into terms of suffering and hardship, and it will easily be seen what a terrible fate awaits the highly civilized people of occupied Europe. There will be no supplies of any kind available to them, for no factories may make anything which is not required by the German military authorities.

If this is taken as a measure of occupied Europe's need for armed intervention, it must also be regarded as a measure of German weakness and desperation. On both counts, the situation seems to call for a whirlwind air offensive, followed immediately by a landing.

Second-front speculation has been diverted from Northern France to West Africa as a possible site for the initial landing. There are those who consider that the troops in the French African Empire would offer the same sort of half-hearted resistance to United Nations forces as they did to the British in another section of the French Empire last summer. It will be remembered that in June, 1941, the British moved out of Palestine into Syria, and that although large elements of French forces fought bitterly for them under the command of Gen. Dentz, they deserted and joined the Fighting French, or merely put up a nominal battle and surrendered.

SECOND AFRICAN FRONT

There are very strong arguments for landing a strong force in French West Africa under Dakar, or in Sierra Leone at Freetown. In either case the purpose would be to rob the Germans of a possible base for extending their control of the Mediterranean and threatening Gibraltar, as well as attacking Allied shipping. But, more important, it would place Allied forces behind Rommel within striking distance of his main source of supply, and compel the Axis to relinquish the whole south shore of the Mediterranean. From that time on, matters would become progressively easier for the United Nations.

Attacks could be launched through Spain or the south of France from North Africa at the same time that an offensive was opened against Northern France from the British Isles. The enemy would find himself open to attack from all sides, and bewildered as to how he should distribute his forces. It is out of the question to consider making a landing on a fortified and strongly defended hostile coast at any point out of range of shore-based fighter aircraft. And so the main assault upon the North of France may be postponed for a while.

None of these considerations, however, applies to West Africa, where forces could be landed under the protection of warships and carrier-borne aircraft, or put ashore on friendly territory, as at Sierra Leone. The very landing of a powerful force in this area, with the serious threat to Rommel's rear, would obviously offer would command the redistribution of German strength. It would thus postpone a showdown in the Middle East which might not go in our favor would be disastrous if it did not.

For the fighting fronts there has been nothing to excite alarm. The Russians are holding well and have prevented a further advance of the enemy either toward the Black Sea or the Caspian in the Caucasus theatre of war. For their own part, the Russians are pressing forward with their offensive operations from Voronezh to Rubezh, with success but unimpressive.

ENEMIES BEING HELD

In the southwest Pacific, the news is encouraging. American ground forces are officially described as having captured six islands in the Solomon group and there is no evidence that the Japanese are in any position to prevent them from consolidating their position and extending the area under their control. The action at Milne Bay, where the Japanese fell into a neat, contrived ambush and suffered heavy loss of materials, has greatly improved Allied morale.

The enemy cannot stand still. He must either go forward and meet the Allied challenge to possession of the territory along the northeastern approaches to Australia, or reconcile himself to being driven out.

In the latter case, he will be well advised to concentrate his strength on manning and fortifying the outer islands, and to leave the main islands to the Allies. The loss of his bases on the Solomons Islands and the sharp, if local, defeat at Milne Bay mark the beginning of a process by which the Japanese military machine in the Southwest Pacific will pass from the offensive to the defensive.

The current developments on the Eastern European front have been noted on the accompanying map of Russia. A map of the Eastern front is also reproduced to illustrate the argument for the landing of forces in West Africa.

Nazis Expected To Admit Soon Defeat Coming

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Douglas Miller, former United States commercial attaché in the Berlin embassy, predicted yesterday the Germans would soon admit an expected defeat. Miller, now assistant to Elmer Davis, head of the Office of Information, told the Overseas Press Club.

"Three years ago the Germans said, 'we have won.' Two years ago they said, 'we will win.' This year they say, 'we must win.' Next year they will say, 'we cannot win,' and thereafter they'll say, 'we've lost. Just as we always expected it.'

Exemptions Made On Export Permits For Candies, Gum

OTTAWA, Sept. 3.—(CP)—A national revenue department order effective today exempted candy, chewing gum and candy from requiring an export permit when shipped to any part of the British Empire. Candies and sweetmeats were also listed under the exemption.

"Party of Centre" Said Possibility

PRISTON, England, Sept. 3.—(CP)—Randolph Churchill, son of the prime minister, predicted in an address today the emergence after the war of a new "party of the centre," if neither the Conservative nor Labour party offered the opportunity to become truly representative of the whole nation.

He told his constituents the pre-war leaders of the Conservative party of which he is a member and his father is a leader, tended to "serve the interests of the purse-proud, acquisitive, selfish minority who for the most part were more alarmed at the spread of Socialism than the rise of Hitlerism."

The Labour party, he said, "is doomed to frustration and impotence if it remains tied to the interests of one class."

Australians Get 2 Beefless Days

CANBERRA, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Commerce Minister William J. Scully announced today Australians would be compelled to go without beef two days weekly soon because beef is urgently needed for the armed forces. Increased consumption of mutton and lamb was suggested.

In other words, the battle of bullets must wait until after the battle of the balloons has been fought and "won."

Of course the writer of this letter may be wrong in his predictions. He may even be right in his predictions but wrong in the conclusions he draws. But we think he has provided food for a while lot of mental mastication. And here are some reasons why we feel that way about the matter:

There are two whole months until the November election. According to official communiques, hundreds of thousands of gallant Russians die along the far-flung eastern battle front each month. Thousands of British, American and Free French troops may be on the but the odds of Egypt within the next two months. Many Australian and American soldiers, sailors and airmen will likely pay the supreme price for the defence of the South Pacific. American men must lose, bitter death in the bleak mist of the Aleutians each day. Canadians are still counting their casualties from Dieppe and must count more in the next two months.

But in spite of all this dreadful urgency, action must be delayed for fear cold, unromantic facts of war will offend the men and women who cast their ballots on that coming November election day.

4 Airmen Killed In Mid-Air Crash While Training

WINNIPEG, Sept. 3.—(CP)

Four airmen were killed yesterday when two Royal Canadian Air Force planes crashed after a mid-air collision near Pulpit, Man. 240 miles northwest of here. A fifth air crew member escaped with slight injuries.

The dead included the pilots and two student air gunners, all members of the No. 7 bombing and gunnery school at Pulpit. The crash occurred 10 miles northwest of the main airbase at the Pulpit where the planes were on a routine training flight.

One of the machines was a target towing plane. The operator of the target tow was the only crewman to escape death.

TORONTO, Sept. 3.—(CP)—F. H. Avery, chief placement officer of the Ontario department of labor, told a service club here yesterday that the war emergency training program has given specialized training to 69,914 young men and women in Ontario since the outbreak of war.

Leaders who have courage to tell the cold, harsh truth of the requirements of war are needed by the people of the United States and Canada. And under no other leadership is victory possible.

When a Girl Marries

By RENE RYERSON MART

CHAPTER XIV
TOM gave a disinterested whistle. "Good heavens, girl, what have you been doing to yourself? You look as if you'd lost 10 pounds."

End's face was white and drawn, and in Letty's house, where two little too big for her, she actually looked as if she had shrunk.

She smiled wanly. "Oh, I'll be all right now."

It had been a hard week. Mom had been strong enough to go home the day after her thrilling rescue, but she refused to leave the hospital until she had been assured that someone would be with Pop every minute.

And upon End had fallen the burden of keeping that promise. For Letty had her babies to take care of, and Aunt Faye was too kind of her own comfort to spend many hours a day for a sick man's bedside.

Not that End complained. She was thankful that her father was alive to receive care and attention.

So she had stayed with him faithfully, sleeping propped up in a rocking chair in his room, and only twice during the week had left the hospital to bathe and change clothes.

It had not been until Friday night, when Pop had been at last pronounced out of danger, that she had had any notion of a full night's sleep.

Mom was in the cottage kitchen with the girls, where Tom had found them that Sunday morning. His words focused her worried attention upon her youngest daughter, who had been the strain in the cottage since the day after the crash.

"She does look right peaked," Mom agreed with Tom. With vigorous decision she took the dish towel out of End's hand. "I'll help Letty with the dinner. You borrow her bathing suit and go for a swim with Tom before we eat. I'll do you good."

Vainly End protested. Tom dragged her out of the kitchen threateningly.

"Now mind your mother. Get into that bathing suit, pronto—his eyes twinkled—"I'll put it on myself."

"And lay down there in the sun until you get some color in your face," Mom added.

Reluctantly End ducked into the bedroom and put on Letty's bathing suit. Saying that she was too tired to swim had been only an excuse.

The truth of it was, she dreaded being alone with Tom.

It was half a city block to the lake front from the cottage occupied temporarily by the Sharons. Then one had a choice of scrambling recklessly down a steep bank, or walking another two squares to the resort hotel and going down the steps there to the boat pier.

Tom elected the path down the bank. He helped End and then, still holding her hand, raced her through the shallow breakers that were dashing lazily on the sandy beach. The water was cold, despite the hot August sun beating down on it.

When she caught her breath, End turned over on her back and floated. Tom struck out with his vigorous crawl stroke and swam out into the lake until his head was a mere bobbing speck on the green water. Then he surfaced and came back to her, the water foaming from the drive of his strong arms.

He looked at End and grinned. There were white circles under her eyes now where a few minutes before there had been shadows, and the red of her face was turning a beautiful scarlet. "I've been waiting for you to get out of the water, or you'll be parboiled."

There, it was out. She hadn't meant to tell him this way. In fact, she hadn't meant to tell him at all. She had fooled herself all into thinking that she could take up her life where she had left it before she met Dr. Henry Holliday. But now she knew that she couldn't.

Tom stared at her, at first unbelievably, then his face went white under its tan.

"I'm sorry, Tom. Really I am," End whispered wretchedly. She wished she could wipe that look from his face.

He stared past her stonily, out at the lake, and when she saw that he wasn't going to say anything more, she ventured timidly that perhaps it would be better if she didn't drive back to town with him as they had planned. She could take a train.

"I don't suppose it will hurt you to ride some more with me," he cut in harshly.

"Tom—I didn't mean that I'll be glad to ride with you if you want me to."

"I came up here to get you, didn't I?"

It wasn't a cheerful ride. Tom was silent and surly, and End was harried by a sense of guilt. She wasn't accustomed to feeling that she had behaved badly—and she knew she had to Tom.

She was also unusually aware of the secret hope beating deep in her heart. A shameful hope that she wouldn't admit even to herself, but that was there as she said her constrained good-bye to Tom, when at last she reached the unpretentious little frame house on Elm street.

That quickened the tempo of her blood while she took a quick bath and brushed her hair until it gleamed like pale gold, and fixed it carefully in the new way flunk Holliday had selected.

Then she slipped into one of her old summer dresses hanging in her bedroom closet and took a critical inventory in the mirror. She didn't need any make-up. For the sunbath she had acquired that afternoon had reddened her lips and given her face a soft and lovely flush. Above her pink cheeks her eyes were wide and shining.

"Nice here, isn't it?" Tom asked lazily.

End agreed.

He sat up suddenly, remembering something that had been on his mind. "Say—I suppose the hospital bill for your folks is pretty steep, wasn't it? I meant to ask her—I went away that morning if you needed any money. I've got a little in the bank."

Somehow that he had saved this little money to buy a ring.

She straightened up jerkily. Tom said at her. "What's the matter?"

"Oh, Tom, don't—"

"Don't buy a ring now."

"Why? You want one, don't you?"

"No!" It was as if the word escaped of its own volition. Certainly End had had no premeditated intention of uttering it. But as she said it, her decision was made. She was too tired to go on pretending to go on trying to fool Tom—and herself.

Tom eyed her incredulously. "What do you mean, you don't want a ring?"

The frustration faded from his voice. "You haven't changed your mind, have you?"

She didn't want to hurt Tom. "I was just going to tell him," Tears came into her eyes, and she struggled against them. She must cry. She must make Tom sorry for her.

Puzzled, he watched her for a moment. Then he reached over and pulled her against him with an engendered ring.

End caught her breath.

"I guess I know how you feel, honey," he said soothingly. "You've been through a lot and you're tired and upset. I shouldn't have started talking about our engagement. I only meant that if you'd rather have the loss of the money now, instead of a ring—"

"Tom, please."

He pulled her shoulder. "All right. We won't talk about it. I'll wait."

She pushed herself away from him. Her voice was desperate but determined. The false situation in which she had weakly allowed herself to be drawn had to be ended once and for all.

"If you don't understand, I'm not going to marry you. I don't want to marry you. I don't want to marry you."

There, it was out. She hadn't meant to tell him this way. In fact, she hadn't meant to tell him at all. She had fooled herself all into thinking that she could take up her life where she had left it before she met Dr. Henry Holliday. But now she knew that she couldn't.
